

How to Leverage Private Evaluations in Your IEP Meeting

A practical guide for turning independent evaluation results into meaningful IEP decisions

The law requires your child's school team to consider the findings in a private evaluation.

However, simply handing the report to the team is not enough.

This guide will help you identify important information in the report and use it to guide the IEP discussion.

Step 1: Review the Private Evaluation

1 Start With the Summary
Highlight diagnoses and key statements explaining where your child struggles and where they shine.

2 Review the Scores
Use the provided score charts (or compile a spreadsheet) to look for patterns and disparities in composite and subtest scores.

3 Dive into the Narrative
Highlight the conclusions about strengths, weaknesses, and how they affect classroom performance.

4 Make Your Notes
Create a list of processing deficits and academic areas of need as identified by the evaluator.

5 Check the Recommendations
Highlight instructional method & accommodation recommendations not already in the IEP.

Step 2: Discuss Evaluation with IEP Team

1 Document the Data
Ask the team to include diagnoses and evaluation scores and percentiles that indicate strengths and needs.

2 Ensure Goals Address All Needs
Confirm that the academic needs on your list are addressed with measurable goals.

3 Incorporate Recommendations
Discuss instructional method recommendations (e.g., structured literacy) and ensure all accommodations are included in the IEP.

Parent Tip

Bring your notes and a highlighted copy of the evaluation to your IEP meeting.

The most impactful way to apply this to your specific situation is on a quick call.

We can look at what's happening for your child at school, what should be happening, and what to do next.
